

Packages

A package is a set of routines and data types that forms a part of the Toolbox or Operating System and is stored as a resource. On the original Macintosh computer, all packages were disk-based and brought into memory only when needed; some packages are now in ROM.

The System file contains the standard Macintosh packages and the resources they use or own.

Package name	Resource ID
List Manager Package	0
Disk Initialization Package	2
Standard File Package	3
Floating-Point Arithmetic Package	4
Transcendental Functions Package	5
International Utilities Package	6
Binary-Decimal Conversion Package	7
Apple Event Manager	8
PPCBrowser	9
Edition Manager	11
Color Picker Package	12
Data Access Manager	13
Help Manager	14
Picture Utilities Package	15