EOLHook

The EOLHook field contains the address of a routine that tests a given character to determine whether it is an end-of-line character and returns with the appropriate status flags set in the status register. The default action is to merely compare the character with $0D (a carriage return) and return.

Note that a constant named EOLHook also exists. It is an offset into TEDispatchRec and has a value of zero.